DEPARTMENT OF JOURNALISM

The Quinnipiac undergraduate program in journalism focuses on the principles and practices of news writing and reporting across multiple platforms in a perpetually evolving media landscape. Required courses provide a strong foundation in writing, reporting and diverse storytelling skills.

The wide range of elective courses enables students to focus on a specific medium (such as television, online or new media reporting) or news subject (such as sports, entertainment or visual journalism), or take courses across platforms based on their interests and career goals.

The program culminates in a capstone course during which students work on a student-run news website or TV newscast, and demonstrate their acquired knowledge and execute a sustained investigative project under the guidance of a faculty adviser.
