Quinnipiac has two technology centers: one located in the Arnold Bernhard Library on the Mount Carmel Campus and the other on the North Haven Campus located on the third floor of the Center for Medicine, Nursing and Health Sciences, MNH-338.

The technology centers at Quinnipiac combine the services of computer and audio/visual support. They provide a wide range of services to students, faculty and staff, including computer configuration, diagnosis, limited computer repair, loaner laptops and peripherals, network printing/scanning/copying support, audio/visual event and classroom support as well as loaner audio/visual equipment.

Loaner laptops are available for all faculty, staff and currently enrolled students. The loaner laptop program is strictly for academic use and is designed for short-term loan while a university-required laptop (either personal or obtained through the laptop program) is out of service for repair.

Student employees known as TSAs (technology support assistants) augment the full-time staff and are available for the entirety of the times the centers are open. They are trained to offer computer and audiovisual support. Hours of operation at each of these locations vary. Refer to MyQ for current hours and more details on the services and support that are available.
